How to Respond to Scripture Rejectors

Over the years, legislators have asked about or made the point that when they use the Scriptures as their basis of authority when arguing a point, their opponents commonly say, “But I don’t believe in the Bible.” Does this mean believers should refrain from using the Word of God as their authority? In this study I will attempt to be biblically informative as to how we should respond to those who reject the veracity of Scripture—lest we refrain from using the ultimate epistemological¹ source made known to mankind by his Creator.

Read on, my friend.

Kevin Cramer

U.S. Senator, North Dakota

U.S. Sen. Kevin Cramer, South Dakota, participated in CapMin’s International Training Conference in December and encouraged established ministry leaders and recruits who had traveled from around the world to attend. He said: “CapMin not only provides a safe place which is a very big deal, but we also have the opportunity to study the Word of God in-depth from a Seminary-taught teacher and the Holy Spirit gets to do His work. Thank you for what you do for us—It’s eternal. I hope you feel encouraged by us who have been blessed by you.”

I. INTRODUCTION

Thousands of times over the Bible claims to be the Word of God. For example, in 2 Timothy 3:16, Paul states, All Scripture is inspired by God.... The Greek word for inspiration (theopneustos) means “breathed out of God.”² In 2 Peter 1:20–21, Peter states, *But know this first of all, that no prophecy of Scripture is a matter of one’s own interpretation, for no prophecy was ever made by an act of human will, but men moved by the Holy Spirit spoke from God.*³ Furthermore, the Bible is referred to as the oracles of God in Romans 3:2. Accordingly, is Scripture not sufficient and a reliable basis for all matters pertaining to truth and life? Can we not continually depend on the Word of God as our absolute epistemological source to ascertain what is right—both in our personal lives and in the formatting of good legislation? Of course, we can.

Therefore, how should we respond to someone who rejects the Bible’s authority? Certainly not by jettisoning the use of God’s holy, inerrant Word to mankind which too many a legislator in the past has been intimidated into doing. To do so is to give one’s opponent the home-court advantage. If we discard the Word of God, we will have to prove our case with similar, inferior epistemological sources. By abandoning Scripture, in essence, we elevate all opposing ideologies to an equal level. The mature believer will avoid forsaking this perfect source. Please allow me the opportunity to develop this idea herein.

II. THE REALITY OF SUPPRESSION

Unregenerate members of Congress know that the Bible is true; they conveniently suppress that knowledge. This biblical fact is revealed in many passages of the Bible. Therefore,

Should we believe the person who says, “I don’t believe what the Bible says,” or should we believe what the Bible says about that person?

To further understand what is happening in the minds of Bible rejectors, examine Romans 1:18–21. Herein, the Apostle Paul states clearly:

For the wrath of God is revealed from heaven against all ungodliness and unrighteousness of men who suppress the truth in unrighteousness, because that which is known about God is evident within them; for God made it evident to them. For since the creation of the world His invisible attributes, His eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly seen, being understood through what has been made, so that they are without excuse. For even though they knew God, they did not honor Him as God or give thanks.

Notice the loud exclamation of this passage, i.e., man inherently knows about God and His ways. God’s ways are evident within them, states the apostle. In other words, man has a conscience that has been given to him by his Creator. The conscience is an instinctive function and ability of the brain that provides man with the capability to ascertain good from evil. Such a phenomenal ability is part and parcel to being created in the image of God. Herein is the ability to pass judgment on one's own thoughts and actions. In Romans 2:15, Paul brings further light and definition to this wonderful internal moral compass speaking about mankind, stating:

In that they show the work of the Law written in their hearts, their conscience bearing witness and their thoughts alternately accusing or else defending them.

The Law can best be understood here as God's moral precepts which were first condensed in the Ten Commandments and then later expanded upon in the Mosaic Law of the Pentateuch. Notice that this law is written in individuals' hearts; it is evident within them.

Accordingly, the conscience is to the moral world of man what nerve endings are to a person's physical world. Both are designed by the Creator to protect man from moral or physical danger; such danger, without these warning devices, is capable of harming or even destroying him. Man's conscience, like the physical nervous system, is God's built-in alarm designed to go off loudly when violated.

Jeremiah the prophet underscores this truth from the Old Testament. He records God's words spoken through him to the nation of Israel and ostensibly to all of mankind when he revealed God's statement: "I will put My law within them and on their heart I will write it ..." (Jeremiah 31:33). It follows that since God made man, humans would carry His resemblance.

Greg Bahnsen, a student of the great apologist,⁴ Cornelius Van Til, summarizes this assertion so well, stating:

"The human mind is created by God and therefore in itself naturally revelational of God."⁵

Fascinatingly, when speaking to the West Point graduates in June of 2002, President George W. Bush revealed his personal and profound understanding of the conscience of man stating, "Moral truth is the same in every culture, in every time, and in every place."⁶ In the context of this quote, the former President evidently holds to this truth as a foundational presupposition for the way he governed and led. All officeholders should aspire to the same. Educating those who would destroy or break the law written in their hearts is needless and irresponsible. In one sense, there is no need to educate a fellow legislator on a moral issue because according to Romans 1:19, that which is known about God is evident within them, for God [has already] made it evident to them. They already know the right thing to do morally; they simply suppress that knowledge.

III. THE TESTIMONY OF THE CONSCIENCE

Notice from the book of Genesis—prior to Moses' reception of the Ten Commandments⁷—several passages that

2 Timothy 3:16

All Scripture is inspired by God and profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, for training in righteousness.

Can we not continually depend on the Word of God as our absolute epistemological source to ascertain what is right—both in our personal lives and in the formatting of good legislation? Of course we can.

Benjamin Rush

“By renouncing the Bible, philosophers swing from their moorings upon all moral subjects. ... It is the only correct map of the human heart that ever has been published.”

— Benjamin Rush, signer of the Declaration of Independence, Surgeon General of the Continental Army, ratifier of the U.S. Constitution, “Father of American Medicine,” Treasurer of the U.S. Mint, “Father of Public Schools Under the Constitution.”

Benjamin Rush, Letters of Benjamin Rush, L. H. Butterfield, editor (Princeton, NJ: Princeton University Press, 1951), Vol. II, 936, to John Adams, January 23, 1807.

How to Respond to Scripture Rejectors

serve to illustrate the full and operational mechanism in man known as the conscience. It is not that the discernment of right from wrong is learned later in life or that it is shaped by varying cultural considerations or by a person’s environment along the way; rather, that discernment by the conscience has always been fully developed and present within the human race—and each member of Congress.

Then the Lord said to Cain, “Where is Abel your brother?” And he said, “I do not know. Am I my brother’s keeper?” (Genesis 4:9).

In context, Cain had just murdered his brother. Accordingly, he knew very well where his brother’s body was! So Cain lied to God and made up an excuse. His phrase, “Am I my brother’s keeper?” was ripe with arrogant sarcasm because Abel was a keeper of the sheep (Genesis 4:2). Why did Cain lie unless, of course, he was covering up something, and he was fraught with guilt? The chronological point is this: how else did Cain know that what he had done was wrong apart from his conscience?

“Perhaps my father will feel me, then I will be as a deceiver in his sight, and I will bring upon myself a curse and not a blessing” (Genesis 27:12).

How did Jacob know that what he and his mother were stewing up was wrong and, therefore, deceptive when they contrived to fool Isaac into blessing Jacob in Esau’s place (Genesis 27:1–28:7)? Again, this story illuminates the presence of an internal ability to ascertain right from wrong. In Genesis 6:5, Moses states, Then the Lord saw that the wickedness of man was great on the earth, and that every intent of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually. Scripture again attests that man is internally aware of his wicked ways; he knows!

IV. THE TESTIMONY OF THE CREATION

Not only has this knowledge about God’s attributes and divine nature been written on man’s conscience, or as we say today, his heart, Romans 1 also states that God’s actual character is clearly seen by that which surrounds man (v. 20). In other words, God’s very nature is also evident to man as witnessed by God’s surrounding creation. In this regard, Psalm 19:1 states, The heavens are telling of the glory of God; and their expanse is declaring the work of His hands. As previously stated, Paul said under the inspiration of God, that God is clearly seen, being understood through what has been made ... (Romans 1:20).

In the book of Acts, Paul further elaborates on God’s revelation of Himself through nature when addressing a pagan audience. In Acts 14:17, he writes, “and yet He did not leave Himself without witness, in that He did good and gave you rains from heaven and fruitful seasons, satisfying your hearts with food and gladness.” According to Scripture then, man has no excuse to deny God’s existence. God continually witnesses of Himself to man both in him (through conscience) and around him (through creation).

V. THE REASON FOR SUPPRESSION

By way of recap, we have seen that it is not that man doesn't know of God's existence or what constitutes sin; rather, he suppresses it.⁸ Even though man has a God-given sensing ability internally and externally to inherently know what is right and what is wrong, Scripture says that he willfully attempts to suffocate it. Why? John 3:19–20 reads:

This is the judgment, that the Light has come into the world, and men loved the darkness rather than the Light, for their deeds were evil. For everyone who does evil hates the Light, and does not come to the Light for fear that his deeds will be exposed.

Man's corruption of God's morality does not stem from a lack of education. Rather, the educated and calculated willful rebellion of God's precepts characterizes every sinner. While some may display this rebellion in active, outward ways and to a higher degree, others are passive in their resistance and hostile toward their Maker. As a matter of fact, in Romans 8:7, every unbeliever is said to be at war with God (cf. Colossians 1:21). As seen in John 3, this aggressive suppression of moral truth extends out of the evilness of man's sinning ways. This sinful rebellion is further illuminated by the following passages that highlight his bias in the direction of and toward sin.

Unregenerate people in general, legislators in specific, are not morally naïve, blank tablets innocently standing by to be scrolled on by the faithful members of the House. They are not tabula rasa.⁹ The aforementioned Scriptures reveal quite the contrary. Unbelievers carry a bias toward sin because of their endemic sinful nature (cf. Genesis 3). They find themselves resisting the truth lest they be confronted by their own evil ways.¹⁰ And when left with the choice between suppressing that which they know and outwardly manifesting hypocrisy, many are those who will opt for the former. That duplicity explains why so many avoid Bible study in the Capitol. They are living in sin, and they know it, and to sit in an environment where the Scriptures are being proclaimed is hugely uncomfortable. They find it better to tell themselves the lie that the Scriptures aren't true.

Psalm 14:1 punctuates this pressure to avoid hypocrisy people face. The fool has said in his heart, "There is no God." Note that the identification tag for being called a fool in Scripture is not so much related to a person's lack of intellectual ability as it is a reference to a diminished moral integrity.¹¹ Accordingly, what the Psalmist means is that the person who lacks moral integrity has gone so far in his heart as to deny God's existence by declaring to himself and those around him that "There is no God." In an attempt to live with the continual crossing of his conscience comes a need to deny the Creator because it routinely screams of the presence of God! Akin to the Microsoft monopoly trial of the past, God has delivered every human being into the world with His programming already installed! The God program always pops up!

Daniel Webster

"The Bible is a book ... which teaches man his own individual responsibility, his own dignity, and his equality with his fellow man."

— Daniel Webster, U.S. Senator, Secretary of State, "Defender of the Constitution."

Daniel Webster, Address Delivered at Bunker Hill, June 17, 1843, on the Completion of the Monument (Boston: T. R. Marvin, 1843), 31.

Francis Scott Key

“[M]ay I always hear that you are following the guidance of that blessed Spirit that will lead you into all truth, leaning on that Almighty arm that has been extended to deliver you, trusting only in the only Savior, and going on in your way to Him rejoicing.”

— Francis Scott Key, U.S. attorney for the District of Columbia, author of “The Star-Spangled Banner.”

Hugh A. Garland, The Life of John Randolph of Roanoke (New York: D. Appleton & Company, 1853), Vol. II, 104, from Francis Scott Key to John Randolph.

Biblically, to declare “There is no God” or “I don’t believe in the Bible” is equivalent to the fireman who switches off the alarm in his attempt to gain some needed rest.

So, don’t buy the excuses of suppressors. Learn to view suppression as someone’s crying out for help. The governmental leader who states rebelliously, “I don’t believe in the Bible” needs someone to come alongside and help him or her to quit overpowering (by way of self-deception) that which they know to be right. Accurately diagnosed, on display is a strong will in need of deliverance from sin. They need a loving believer to call them to repentance and liberate them from their bondage through reception of the Lord Jesus Christ. Is there any wonder why God mandates every believer to evangelize? The prescription is the central cure for the ailment.

Man’s Biases Toward Sin

“The heart is more deceitful than all else and is desperately sick; who can understand it?” (Jeremiah 17:9).

But a natural man does not accept the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness to him; and he cannot understand them, because they are spiritually appraised (1 Corinthians 2:14).

And even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled to those who are perishing, in whose case the god of this world has blinded the minds of the unbelieving so that they might not see the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God (2 Corinthians 4:3–4).

But evil men and impostors will proceed from bad to worse, deceiving and being deceived (2 Timothy 3:13).

To the pure, all things are pure; but to those who are defiled and unbelieving, nothing is pure, but both their mind and their conscience are defiled (Titus 1:15).

VI. SUMMARY

Humans possess a strong and continual testimony to the existence of God directly from God—no matter where they live in the world. This is known theologically as general revelation, meaning God’s character attributes and nature are evident within man (via his conscience) and around him (via creation). However, in his sin, he suppresses that knowledge. Accordingly, his greatest need is to be exposed to special revelation, the proclamation of the Gospel, and upon repentance and submission to it, he is set free and made anew. Paul succinctly stated this truth in 2 Corinthians 5:17:

Therefore if anyone is in Christ, he is a new creature; the old things passed away; behold, new things have come.

Further regarding special revelation, Cornelius Van Til wrote:

Whenever the unbeliever encounters the gospel in Scripture, he recognizes the voice of God speaking authoritatively in its words; the divine character, convincing testimony, and self-authorizing quality of its message cannot be evaded. Unbelievers immediately discern and understand the evidence about God in their natural experience and recognize the voice of God when they read the Bible.¹²

This is supported by Isaiah 55:11 which amplifies the role of Scripture in converting the soul:

“So will My word be which goes forth from My mouth; it will not return to Me empty, without accomplishing what I desire, and without succeeding in the matter for which I sent it.”

It stands to reason that Christians in the Capitol need to regularly and consistently proclaim the Scriptures and not shy away from them because someone supposedly “doesn’t believe in them.” For in the proclamation of the authoritative Word of God, is the power to change the Capitol and the culture regardless of a man’s rebellion toward God. In the proclamation of the Word of God, lives and nations are changed!

William Penn, one of the fathers of our country, keenly understood that Capitols and their cultures are the consequences of conversions :

“Governments, like clocks, go from the motion men give them; and as governments are made and moved by men, so by them they are ruined too. Wherefore governments rather depend on men than men upon governments. Let men be good, and the governments cannot be bad; if it be ill, they endeavor to cure it.

But if men be bad, let the government be never so good, they will endeavor to warp and spoil it to their turn.

I know some say let us have good laws and no matter for the men who execute them; but let them consider that though good laws do well, good men do better; for good laws [are in] want [of] good men and [will] be altered or evaded by ill men.”¹³

William Penn was wise to see this truth. Don’t pay any attention to those who say, “The Word of God is out of date; we shouldn’t use it as our authority.” They are those who are ignorant of what this lesson just explained. Only the Scripture changes hearts, which change laws, cultures, and Capitols.

Explain to those who “don’t believe in the Bible” that you are here to help liberate them from their willful suppression of that which they know to be truth.

The book of Acts records how a small band of men—the apostles—in very short order turned the world upside down (Acts 17:6, KJV) during the first century in which they lived. This small team of uneducated, common men were not elite leaders, so how were they able to saturate the world with the gospel—changing lives, changing culture, and eventually changing the Roman Empire?

Scripture provides the answer: not only did they fulfill the Great Commission one soul at a time through a ministry of geometric evangelism and discipleship, but they succeeded by concentrating on and impacting a particular element of society, specifically kings and all who are in authority (1 Timothy 2:1–4).

All in Authority: Reigniting the Bible's Top-Down Missions Strategy provides the biblical exegesis for this missional strategy that is found in both the Old and New Testaments. The book provides a clarion call for the Church to make political public servants a priority mission field in our nation today. Request your complimentary copy at capmin.org.

Accordingly, rather than refrain from using the Scriptures, proclaim boldly to those who are bluffing all around you. For God has not given us a spirit of timidity, but of power and love and discipline (2 Timothy 1:7).

1. Epistemology is “the study of the method and grounds of knowledge.” In other words, it indicates what your basis is for knowing something to be true.
2. Grammatically similar Greek constructions (Romans 7:12; 2 Corinthians 10:10; 1 Timothy 1:15; 2:3; 4:4) argue persuasively that the translation all Scripture is inspired is accurate. Inspired by God literally means, “breathed out by God” or “God-breathed.” (MSB)
3. Note in 2 Peter 3:15–16 that Peter testifies that Paul was writing Scripture. First Thessalonians 2:13 testifies to the fact that the apostles knew they were speaking and writing the Word of God.
4. An apologist is someone who defends the faith (cf. 1 Peter 3:15).

7. The Ten Commandments does not occur until the book of Exodus.
8. The first chapter of Romans goes on to teach that when mankind continually suppresses the truth of God that is shed abroad in his heart that he begins to dull his conscience. This is known as a reprobate mind, where the conscience no longer functions properly. And gone, then, is the ability to internally discern right from wrong. This condition is akin to a man with leprosy who, due to nerve damage, can no longer sense danger and becomes susceptible to many a problem that leads to his ruin.
